Reception For Seniors

The spacious home and grounds of Mr. and Mrs. E. I. Price on Dry Creek Road presented a very fairylike appearance Saturday evening, when the annual reception for the senior class was given there. Beautiful Japanese lanterns shed a glow outside and flowers added their beauty to the scene.

Messrs. Kalas and Halamicek, accompanied on the piano by Miss Bessie Kalas, rendered several charming selections during the evening, and Mr. Ernest Barron sang.

Some of the more prominent characteristics or "leanings" of the seniors were depicted in various ways, from which the company guessed the individuals. It furnished a great deal of amusement.

Ice-cream and cake were served at the conclusion of the evening and every one felt that this had been one of the most enjoyable occasions of the kind.

To Boost the County

SAN JOSE, June 14.—The impetus given promotion work in Santa Clara county by the Panama-Pacific exposition in San Francisco has been noticeable for some time past, both in the exceptional activity of the various civic organizations in the cities and towns of the valley and in the unusual number of persons who are being attracted to the valley by invitations and literature sent out by these bodies. Never before has the spirit of unity and co-operation between the several chambers of commerce, boards of trade and improvement clubs been so pronounced, or the principle of mutual helpfulness been so generally recognized. It is felt that now, if ever, the citizens of Santa Clara valley must pull together, in order that advantage may be taken of the golden opportunity offered by the exposition to show multitudes of eastern residents the natural beauties and other attractions of the valley.

It was with this laudable purpose in view that the 1915 service committee of the San Jose chamber of commerce was organized, and this committee, in order to make the work impartial and the more effective, is now urging the appointment of similar committees by all the chambers of commerce and other promotion organizations in the county. Gilroy, Palo Alto and Berryessa have been visited by the San Jose committee, and all have appointed 1915 committees to cooperate with the former committee receiving and entertaining visitors to the valley. Among the chambers of commerce to be visited this week by the San Jose committee are those of Los Gatos and Mountain View, and it is expected that the entire field will be covered within the next few weeks.

During May the following parties of eastern people visited the valley by invitation of the 1915 service committee, and were entertained by the committee with electric or automobile rides through the valley; Ohio retail grocers, 140 in number; Governor of Maryland and staff; 62 in number; general secretaries of the Y. M. C. A., 200 in number, automobiles provided by San Jose, Los Gatos and Saratoga residents; Pennsylvania party, 20 in number, and a party of 70 congressmen and senators with members of their families.

The San Jose chamber of commerce contributed largely to the entertainment fund of the G. A. R. encampment, which brought several thousand people into the valley for a space of four or five days. Several large parties are booked by the 1915 committee for the present month, and many are coming in July and in August.

Perhaps You Don't Realize How Popular You Are

Once in a while I hear some of my customers criticizing certain people for trading out of town. These critics speak quite bitterly, as though they had been done a personal injury. Now, why should any one but a store-keeper care whether people trade at home or not? If you and I are honest and mind our own affairs, whose business is it where we trade? Isn't this a free country?

Still, there's something at the bottom of that feeling of resentment. Let us see what it is.

In general, community life is founded on its local institutions. Churches, social organizations, and business houses all have their part. Whatever strengthens them, and increases their power to serve, benefits you and me. Whatever weakens them, hurts us. When people take their money or personal influence away from home the instinct of self protection prompts their neighbors to resent it.

If your fellow citizens want you in the social life of your home town you ought to be glad. It shows that you have the faculty of making yourself popular. If your home store-keeper wants your trade you ought to be glad, too. Why bless you, some people are so grouchy and hard to please that merchants would pay them to stay out of the stores. But you are not that kind. We like to see your smiling face and hear your cherry "Good morning". COME OFTEN.

RELICS OF OLD RACE

IMPORTANT FIND REPORTED BY NEVADA SCIENTISTS.

Traces of Ancient Civilization That Antedates Anything Known in American History Said to Be a Discovery of Recent Date.

The archeological department of the University of Nevada has nearly completed the exploration of a cave in Nevada, sealed up by nature 3,000 years ago. It contains relics of what is believed to be the ancient race from which the American Indians sprung, a race far older than the Aztecs. Among the things brought to light is a skull declared to be more than 5,000 years old certainly and possibly in existence several hundred thousand years ago. If these surmises are correct, it is older than the Piltdown skull, found in Kent, England.

Along with the skull were found many relics of a prehistoric race in a remarkable state of preservation, because, they have been hermetically sealed in nature's own preservatives.

The first mention of this ancient civilization that is remembered by white men dates back to 1844, when General Fremont led from California a little band of whites across a new trail through the Rockies. He followed the Humboldt river until he came to the shores of what is now called Humboldt lake, a half mile east of the main Humboldt range of mountains, and a mile south of Lovelock, Nev. In the region of the lake he entered the land of the Piute, the chief of whom was Winnemucca. The trail makers were met by the Indian chieftain with open arms.

General Fremont and his party were guests of the Piute band for many days. Familiarity with other tribes had taught Fremont a method of communication by means of signs. He asked the Indian chief if he, in his great wisdom, could tell the white man whence came the red men—their origin. The aged chief by signs indicated that the history of the Indians went back to the beginning of the world. It told him his ancestors had driven a whole nation into a huge cavern and sealed them there to perish.

When years later Chief Winnemucca had learned the white man's tongue the Piute legends spread among the pioneer miners and finally reached the ears of scientific men. With the coming of educators into Nevada in the last 25 years interest quickened with reported fossil discoveries in the beds of extinct rivers and on the falls of canyons.

At Winnemucca's death his daughter, Sarah, became attached to the family of an army officer, and through them the legends became public when they were recounted in a book printed in 1870.

Her granddaughter, Sarah Winnemucca, was educated in a reservation school. Her imagination fired by the legends of her people, she repeated them to her instructors, until finally Prof. J. C. Jones, chief of the archeological department of the state university, determined to make a search for the lost cave. The stories indicated that it must be somewhere near the Humboldt lake. Sarah Winnemucca picked a spot as near as the legends could guide her, from which point the scientists conducted their search successfully.

Cost of Building Wire Fence.

An idea of the cost of building barbed-wire fence is given in a circular relating to fence building in North Dakota, recently issued by the United States department of agriculture. The costs in North Dakota are high, owing to the fact that all material, including posts, must be shipped in, and for this reason the figures are thought to represent practically a maximum for this country. The maximum cost per rod is 36.9 cents, for a three-wire fence with posts spaced one rod apart. A two-wire fence with posts spaced one rod apart costs 32.2 cents per rod; a four-wire fence with posts spaced two rods apart costs 29.7 cents, and a five-wire fence with posts spaced three rods apart, 30 cents. The figures also show the low cost of wire as compared with posts both in construction and in upkeep.—Popular Mechanics.

City Under International Rule.

When the plans are in full operation for the government of Tangier, Morocco, "the first really international city of the world," the community will have as a legislative body an assembly chosen by popular vote and composed of 24 Moroccan members and 11 foreigners, representatives of the powers. A mixed court is provided for, along the lines of the international court in Egypt. The arrangement is that it is to consist of two Frenchmen, one of whom will preside; two Spaniards, two Englishmen and one German. A Spaniard is to be public prosecutor. The war, of course, may upset the program permanently.

Learning to Keep House.

"In Democratic Denmark," according to Edwin G. Cooley, "the education of country girls in housekeeping has followed as a natural appendix to the training of country boys in agriculture."

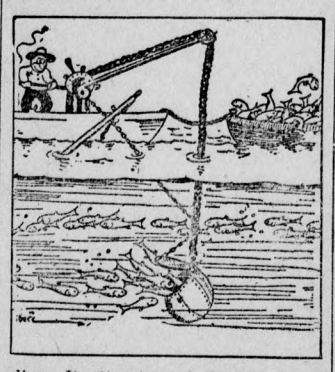
FISH WITH SCOOP

Philadelphians Have Discarded Hook and Line.

Of Course There Will Be Some Who Will Not Readily Believe This Story, but There Always Are Skeptics.

When you go fishing you take a pole and reel and wind up your line when you get a bite. You probably have a hook on the end of your line with bait on it, and occasionally get a fish. Well, you're wasting time. If you doubt it, join the Fish Liars' club.

Members of the club were out today on the Delaware pulling up fish by the hundreds. For the first time they used the automatic magnetic scoop. This device is just what the name implies. It attracts and then captures. Furthermore, it enables the fishermen to catch hundreds of small fish alive, and this marks the beginning of a new era for the club. After sorting out all the large fish for feasting purposes the small fish will be sold as aquarium pets. Many Delaware sunfish have a decidedly blonde tinge and could readily pass for goldfish.



Members of the club believe if they are kept in fresh, clean water they will never tarnish.

But as to the magnetic scoop. It was designed at a meeting of the club in the back room of Harvey C. McCarthy's cigar store up in Kensington, and was patented by Bill Harrison, the well-known angler.

The scoop is made of steel and is sunk in the water on two long chains. The chains are attached to a universal crane, which is carried on a boat. One of the chains operates the lid of the scoop, while the other drags the scoop along. The interior of the scoop is coated with beef juice and sulphur, and as it plunges through the water appetizing odors are emitted. This attracts the fish. They peep in the scoop to see what it is all about and the lid immediately goes down.

You may ask: "How does the fisherman know when the scoop has fish in it." They can tell by the weight on the boat and when they find the pulling is getting harder.

In a short trip from Shackamaxon street wharf to Riverton the club caught 971 pounds of perch, weak fish and catties. The new device will also be used on Sunday, and the fellows with the poles and lines along the wharves better bring some newspapers to read, for most of the fish will follow the scoop.—Philadelphia Record.

Old Fashions Return With the War.

Among the many changes that the war is bringing into the streets and the home some of the most significant are so quiet and unobtrusive that people hardly notice them. One of these is the change that has come over the look of households of persons of fastidious tastes and strict esthetic conduct. Formerly the idea of a mounted photograph (except perhaps a reproduction of an old master) was thought to be quite banal and terribly suburban. Today you find their mantelpieces crowded with photographs, some even pinned on the wall without the slightest regard for spacing and arrangement—details which formerly would have taken an afternoon's thought to settle. Our artistic houses are being ruined without a single regret. Another reversion to simpler days is the return of the old-fashioned hair broom with its little oblong frame of gold prettily wrought inclosing a tiny panel for a strand of hair. Some of them are originals bought in curio shops or rummaged out from old cases, but the hair in them today is young and newly cut.—Manchester Guardian.

Influence of Dams on Fish.

The influence of river dams on fisheries seems to be only very imperfectly understood; and the effects on fishes and mollusks of the new barrier across the Mississippi at Keokuk, Ia., are being investigated by the United States bureau of fisheries. At this place unusual facilities for the study of fish migration are afforded. Important fishery developments in the great river lake created are expected, and it is believed that the increased fish supply will after a time largely compensate for loss of crops on drowned farm lands.

Imitation Air Travel.

Imitation flight is the novel recreation idea of Henry Salsbury of London. A car suspended above the ground is given the motions of a flying aeroplane, and motion pictures, taken from an elevation during actual flight, are projected upon the surface, giving the occupants of the car a complete illusion of traveling along through the air.

When Love Grows Cold

By H. M. EGBERT

(Copyright, 1915, by W. G. Chapman.)

"O dear, I wish I had a home!" sighed pretty little Mrs. Garrett, standing disconsolately in the center of her little room in the Grand National hotel at Louisport.

There were four trunks in the little room, and Doris, the little girl, was seated forlornly upon the top of the pile, staring as disconsolately as her mother at the crowded cubic feet which were to be their home for the next few days.

A knock at the door; an elderly lady and a younger one, verging upon middle age, entered.

"Well, Molly, home again!" remarked the young one with unpleasant emphasis in her tones.

"Yes," sighed Molly Garrett.

"And John off again, as usual, I suppose?"

"Kansas City!" said Molly, almost weeping.

"Well, you'd better come to us until he returns," said the elder woman, who was her stepmother. "I don't know why my house should be upset in this way with your comings and goings, but since you would marry a traveling man I'll have to bear with it."

Little Mrs. Garrett began to cry. She was completely under the thumb of her stepmother and stepsister, Amelia. She had never had much independence of will; perhaps that was why she had married a drummer during her stepmother's absence. She knew that her family did not look with favor upon John Garrett.

For the past seven years they had lived mainly in hotels. John, who was fond of his wife, had taken her everywhere with him. The little girl was born in a hotel in Missouri. She had been baptized in Omaha, and her education, which had been begun in Milwaukee, was to be continued in Louisport, Mrs. Garrett's home city. That was why John had brought his wife and daughter there three hours before, bidden them a hasty farewell, and started for Kansas City with a heavy heart. He was so inconsequential; he thought that so long as he paid the bills it didn't matter where his wife lived.

Established in her stepmother's home as a paying guest, little Mrs.

"My What?" Cried Molly.

Garrett listened to a daily tirade against her husband.

"It isn't any life to ask a woman to share," declared her stepmother. "Molly, I warned you not to marry that man. Who knows what he's doing when he's away from you? Those salesmen are a bad lot."

Little Molly Garrett began to cry again. She loved John dearly, but she was easily upset and rendered miserable, and the suggestion worked upon her mind.

Two weeks later John Garrett popped into his stepmother's house, breezy, jolly, stout, rubicund and middle aged. The women received him coldly. They did not like that type of man. They moved in the best circles of the limited society of Louisport and looked down on John.

Molly, back for the first time in two or three years, began to renew acquaintance with the fashionable folks of her home town. After John's departure she felt an unaccustomed sense of relief. She perceived what the years of travel had made her forget. John was not exactly a gentleman. His boisterous, good-natured manners, his effuse friendliness were singularly at variance with the calm repose of Louisport's four hundred. All her old friends had married and were doing well. She looked at their comfortable little homes, and a sense of bitterness began to stir in her heart.

And Sayles, her old sweetheart, was still unmarried. He was manager of the local bank now, and was reputed to have been slated for the command of the metropolitan head office. He had an automobile and often took Molly out driving. Her stepmother, who hated John with a cold, implacable hatred, seemed to approve of this friendly interest on Sayles' part, as did her stepsister.

"Mamma," said the little girl one afternoon, "is Mr. Sayles going to be my new papa?"

Molly, startled at the childish query, turned upon the little girl sharply.

"What nonsense!" she exclaimed. "Why do you ask me such a thing?"

"Because," answered the child, "I heard stepmother talking with the ladies at the tea yesterday about your divorce."

"My what?" cried Molly.

"Isn't that the right word, mamma? They said you were going to get a divorce and that Mr. Sayles was going to be my new papa. And I won't have him," she continued, stamping her little foot. "I want my old papa."

Molly looked at her aghast. But before she had time to collect her wits Mr. Sayles drove up in his automobile and the two went out along the streets and into the country.

Sayles turned and saw that Molly was crying into her handkerchief.

"Why, Mrs. Garrett!" he exclaimed. "What is the matter?"

That was too much for Molly. She felt that she had always been neglected and misunderstood. She told him the child's remarks. Sayles listened, and, when she had ended, he put his arm about her and drew her head down upon his shoulder.

"I guess the child had about the hang of it, didn't she, Molly?" he asked.

"You mean—"

"Why, dear, everybody knows that John Garrett isn't worthy to blacken your shoes. You've had a miserable life since you married him, and—and I've always loved you, Molly. Now let me tell you something. I have a chance to open a branch of the firm out West. It isn't as good as something else I have my eye on, but I can wait six months while you're getting the legal preliminaries settled. Come out with me, and you can get the divorce afterward."

He took her in his arms, and Molly frankly abandoned herself to this new love that had come into her heart.

She was to tell her family that John had sent for her to Kansas City. They would never know. Then she was to slip off to New York and meet Sayles there. There was only a week of waiting before he could wind up his affairs. But on the fifth day Doris developed a feverish cold, on the sixth she was down with pneumonia, and on the seventh she was apparently dying.

"I want my papa!" moaned the little girl as she fought for breath.

Molly telegraphed for John. Sayles was a constant visitor at the house. When Doris' illness developed into pneumonia he seemed like a man distracted. He could not bear the thought of postponement. He came into the sickroom and stood looking at Doris, who was delirious.

"Molly, is this—going to keep us apart?" he asked.

"Oh, I can't leave her now," Molly answered.

"But why not?" the man persisted. "You can do no good and you are only wearing yourself out. Your stepmother will take care of the child, and after she is well she can come on to us."

Molly looked dully at him. Her heart was torn between love of the child, newly awakened in her, and Sayles. She did not think at all of the man who just then came into the sickroom—John.

He sat down at the bedside and took Doris' hand in his. The child knew him, she smiled at him. Presently she was fast asleep. For hours John Garrett sat at her side, holding the hot little hand in his, and never stirred. His presence seemed to infuse a new atmosphere into the room.

Sayles had gone long ago. Molly sat upon the other side of the bed. The presence of John always awakened in her heart sentiments that she was incapable of analyzing. Dimly she felt that John was a good man, in spite of his vulgarity, in spite of his noisiness. She was thinking now as she had never thought before.

She saw herself again, with the tyrannous stepmother who had taken the place of her own mother, now only a dim figure in the mists of her childhood. She saw how the two women had always tyrannized over her, how she had been a pliant tool in their supple hands. She remembered her courtship, how John had taken her away, their honeymoon together, the long years before her stepmother had forgiven her. Would John have acted as Sayles had done? Molly felt instinctively that she could not picture John in such a role, and her heart went out to him in a sudden outpouring of love.

Presently John looked up.

"Molly," he said.

"John?"

"Pretty tired of this sort of life, aren't you? Say, I wanted to tell you some time ago, but I was waiting until things seemed more sure. Do you remember that little place down by Easton you always wished you could live in? Well, I've bought it. I'm off the road for good now—got a position in Easton at seventy-five that looks like a sticker. We'll have a home together after all, and it's all ready and furnished with that style of furniture you liked, as soon as Doris gets well."

"John!" cried his wife. "But—but—the doctor said she—"

"She wasn't going to get well? Why, of course she'll get well. She's better already. Say, do you suppose I came all the way from Kansas City to let her die?"

GAS COOKING WITHOUT OVEN

Potatoes, Apples or Spaghetti May Be Cooked Excellently on Top of the Stove.

An expert in using gas for cooking, and who is an economist as well, gives these instructions:

Put an iron plate over one of the burners, lay a couple of potatoes on it, cover it with an inverted deep pan that fitted the plate, and light the gas. The potatoes will be done in at least two-thirds of the usual time. Take a little pan of apples, put in with them a little water and sugar and place them to bake in the same way as the potatoes. Those apples will come out as even and nice a brown as you would want to see.

Then cook a dish of spaghetti. Prepare the spaghetti by putting the dish on the hot plate, cover it with another pan. When the spaghetti is baked, cover the dish and just slip it down underneath the gas flame for a few minutes. It will be something to be proud of when it comes out—a fine rich brown—and you know it would taste right just by looking at it.

SERVICE FOR AFTERNOON TEA

Having Cup on Matching Plate, Without Saucer, Is Excellent Method, for Obvious Reasons.

An easy way of serving a cup of tea is to place the cup on a matching plate, and to put a folded tea napkin, a spoon and a fork on the plate. Then pass whatever sandwiches or cakes you may desire to serve with the tea. They can be accommodated on the plate, and daintily and easily eaten.

If elaborate cakes or sandwiches are served with tea and no plate is provided it is difficult to manage them balanced on the saucer of the cup. If a separate plate is held under the cup and saucer, it is practically useless, for the saucer so nearly fills it that the margin at the edge is not wide enough to accommodate the cakes.

Of course when a simple wafer or easily eaten sandwich is to be passed with the tea the saucer of the teacup is sufficiently commodious to accommodate it.

Lemon Buns.

One-fourth cupful of sugar, one tablespoonful butter, one cupful of milk, one-half cupful currants, one-eighth cupful lukewarm water, three cupfuls flour, one egg, one-half yeast cake, one-fourth teaspoonful salt, one-half lemon, one-fourth teaspoonful nutmeg. Cream the butter and sugar, then add egg well beaten. Mix thoroughly, add one cupful flour, then the milk, lukewarm, then the rest of the flour. Lastly add the yeast dissolved in warm water. Beat for 15 minutes, cover closely and let rise. When risen stir in currants, which must be well floured, then add the nutmeg and grated rind and juice of lemon. Place on your pastry board, roll out half an inch thick and cut out with medium-sized biscuit cutter. Place one-half the buns in greased pans, leaving plenty of space. Then place other half on those already in the pan. Let rise very light, bake in quick oven. When done brush with white of egg and sprinkle with powdered sugar.

Choice of Vegetables.

Selection of the vegetables for dinner has much to do with the success of a meal. Those which resemble each other should be avoided, as squash, sweet potatoes and parsnips, and with these pumpkin pie should be omitted; also, more than one vegetable requiring the same kind of dressing, as creamed cabbage and creamed carrots, or a vinegar dressing as cabbages, beets and spinach. Variety in flavors, rather than those that bear a near relation to each other, gives the most satisfactory results.

Virginia Waffles.

Cook a cupful of cornmeal in a cupful and a half of boiling water for 15 minutes. Add a cupful and a half of milk, a cupful of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, teaspoonful of salt, two eggs beaten separately and a tablespoonful of melted butter, also two tablespoonfuls of sugar, and beat well. Bake on hot waffle irons. Cornmeal griddle cakes are made in the same way though the batter should be somewhat thinner.

Cream Toast.

Toast a sufficient number of slices of bread crisp and brown. Make a sauce of one pint of milk which has been brought to the boiling point and thickened with a tablespoonful of flour rubbed smooth in a little cold milk. Season well with salt, and add a large tablespoonful of butter. Cook till creamy. Then dip each slice of toast in the sauce, and lay in a deep dish; pour the sauce over the slices when the dish is full, and serve hot.

Chicken Pie.

Cook two fat chickens until tender in water slightly salted. When done place pieces evenly in pie pan, make a gravy (not too thick) and pour over chicken to cover. Have ready sufficient mashed potatoes, nicely seasoned with cream, butter and salt; spread evenly over top of pie, put into oven with a hot fire, bake about twenty minutes; serve.

Eggless Loaf Cake.

One cupful sugar, scant one-half cupful shortening, one cupful milk, two teaspoonfuls baking powder, two and one-half cupfuls flour; one-half teasponful nutmeg, one teaspoonful lemon extract, one cupful raisins. Bake in medium oven.

CAP and BELLS.

PERTINENT QUESTION OF BOY

Willie Figures It Out How Father Is So Small and His Uncle Jim So Big and Tall.

At a dinner party reference was made to pertinent questions, and Congressman James S. Parker of New York recalled the story of how something along that line was exploded by little Willie.

William had an uncle on his mother's side who was a six-footer, while his father wasn't much bigger than a full-grown sparrow. Watching his uncle one day thoughts came into Willie's mind.

"Mamma," said he, turning to his maternal relative, "how is it that Uncle Jim grew so big and tall?"

"He was always a good little boy," carefully explained mamma, "and because of that God permitted him to grow up tall and strong."

"I see," thoughtfully used Willie, and then added, "when father was a boy I guess he must have been some kind of a sinner."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

The Masculine Way.

"It's a wonder old Adam didn't make a kick when he lost his job as head gardener of Eden," said Growells.

"Oh, he was just like the men of today," rejoined his wife.

"How's that?" asked the beginner of the trouble.

"He waited until he got home," explained Mrs. Growells, "and then proceeded to raise Cain."

Fully Qualified.

Office Manager—So you want a job, er? What kind of work can you do?

Applicant—Well, I hardly know. Until recently I was assistant instructor in a boxing school, but—

Office Manager (interrupting)—Oh, I can use you all right. Come around in the morning and box our mail order shipments, and in the afternoon you can lick the stamps.

"Just as Good."

We gazed pityingly on the listless drug store clerk leaning against the soda counter.

"Haven't you any ambition?" we inquired, kindly and all that.

"No," he replied, with brightening intelligence, "but I have something just as good."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Alas! Too True.

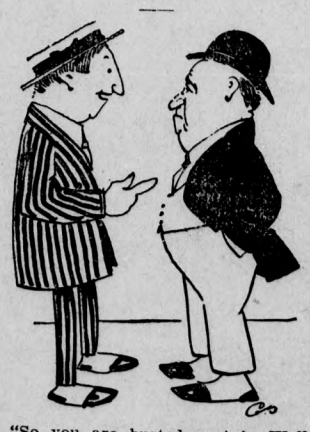
Him—As a rule a man treats a woman as she deserves to be treated.

Her—Yes, I suppose so; but there are exceptions to all rules.

Him—What is the exception to this one?

Her—Well, sometimes he marries her.

HANDICAP.



"So you are busted again! Well, there's a sucker born every minute."

"Yes, and take it from me, old chap, there's a shark born every second."

True, But Misleading.

"Dick hugged me last night before I had the faintest idea of what he was about."

"And what did you do?"

"Why, of course, I was instantly up in arms about it."

The Worst Way.

"That man wrote a highly abusive letter about the injuries he had received."

"Oh, that's not the proper way to write one's wrongs."

Their Peculiarity.

"Are Italian sunsets any different from other sunsets that they should be so called?"

"Yes, inasmuch as they make the day go."

LONGING FOR HOME

Rosebank Held a World of Happiness for One Woman.

By MOLLIE M'MASTER.

(Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

When the village hack turned the corner of the road and shut from Ninian's eyes the last glimpse of Rosebank cottage it seemed as if the world of happiness had been left behind. Around the bend of the road lay the home that had given Ninian birth, and its roses had wafted into her brain the poetic fancies that had begun to express themselves in the form of vivid color sketches. In fact, Rosebank was home to the girl who was forced to leave it in order to seek a market for her art. And home to Ninian meant all that was worth having in life.

"I will come back and buy Rosebank in two or three years," she told herself through her tears; "surely no one will want my isolated little cot and get it away from me before I can earn enough money to purchase it."

Had Ninian possessed even the smallest income she would never have left the place that had become home to her, but her parents had left nothing. With their going she had been left alone, and Rosebank with all its dear memories and associations must be temporarily abandoned while Ninian traveled the road to fortune.

However, the girl was not given to vain regrets, and it was with high hopes and an ever-present dream of her ultimate ownership of Rosebank that she went into the world of struggles. She found others working with great visions leading them on, but none, she felt, had so wonderful an incentive as she. None of them had a tiny rose-hung cottage and a garden that boasted every variety of rose that grew on Long Island. In her mind, Rosebank was already her own, and Ninian was not unhappy. It did not for a moment occur to her that anyone else longed for the cottage as she herself did.

Had she known that Robert Goodwin had pounced upon the vacated cottage like a hungry cat upon a mouse, her struggles would have been bitter instead of sweet.

But Goodwin had taken Rosebank, and his furniture had been moved in a scant few days after Ninian's had gone out. He had a three years' lease with the option of purchase. His hobby was the cultivation of roses, and he had eyed Rosebank through three long years waiting patiently until it should be vacated. Each day he had skimmed by on his motorcycle. The day a sign "To Let" had met his eye was one of the most joyful in Goodwin's life.

He was not deterred from taking the cottage, isolated though it was, because his faithful motorcycle bridged and distance. The quiet and seclusion and the wonderful views from the cottage windows, as well as the old rose garden at the back, would have lured him had the place been ten miles instead of three from the station.

Ninian's work in the field of art progressed with flattering haste. She saved every penny earned and called it her home lodging fund. In the beginning she had gone without lunch in order that the fund might increase the more rapidly. One year crawled by, a second slipped by, and the third drew to a close.

It was almost three years to the day when Ninian sailed for home richer by many thousand dollars and a splendid name in the world of art. She had won a great prize in the Paris school at the close of her third year. She recognized the fact that home longings with Rosebank in the joyfully near future had been her incentive and inspiration that had given her the coveted prize. She was returning now to buy back the cottage.

She had scarcely set foot on American soil before she went out to Long Island and took the walk from the station that led through the chestnut woods to Rosebank.

Fear clutched her heart when she saw smoke issuing from the chimney when the cottage was barely discernable in the distanse. As she drew quickly near her worst fears were realized.

"My cottage! It is occupied!" Ninian cried half aloud and the tears squeezed from her closed eyelids. "If some horrible person has bought Rosebank, I don't want to live any more," she told herself.

Determined to find out that it was not only a caretaker she continued her way. The perfect care the roses were having told her enough. She walked slowly around her loved home, touching the rambler-hung fence that guarded it. Ninian was weeping and the tears trickled down her cheeks unheeded. Life was a weary pilgrimage to her, for the one haven in the world that she longed for had been taken from her. For three long years she had looked forward to the day when she could rest her body and soul in the tiny, rose-clad cottage and draw in the fragrance of it all. Her spirit, she knew, had dwelt there while she was in Paris, but now she and her soul were intruders.

She turned away and walked blindly back to the station.

Robert Goodwin, looking out of his casement window, had seen Ninian. Her hungry eyes gazing longingly at the rose gardens had sent a swift emotion over him.

"That girl must have some frightful tragedy in her life," he commented. "I never saw a pair of eyes so sorrowful."

He went about his pruning and clipping and caring for the roses, but Ninian's eyes haunted him. She seemed still to be walking sorrowfully around and around the outer side of the fence.

So vivid was the girl's picture in his mind that he thought he was dreaming of her the next day when, looking up, he saw her quite close beside him, sitting on the old well at the foot of the rose garden.

Her head was bowed in her arms and Goodwin knew from the shaking of her body that she was weeping with complete abandonment to her grief.

He hardly knew whether to go quietly away and let her have her cry out or whether to attract her attention and do his best to comfort her.

His dog had solved the question by going over to the weeping girl and slipping his long, cool nose up beneath her arms. Goodwin swallowed the lump in his throat when he saw the girl's fingers draw the dog's head close to her. Creature comfort was instinctive in the animal, but he himself had lacked the initiative.

He coughed delicately and the girl looked up. Her eyes were starry and tear-wet. Goodwin knew that he was going to fall in love with Ninian, and he worded his thoughts accordingly.

"Please confide in me," he said softly. "I will do anything in my power to allay your suffering. Tell me your troubles." He added the last word in so soothing a voice that Ninian smiled through her tears. She liked Goodwin at first sight.

"It is only that I have slaved for three years to come back and buy my old home. I have longed for it and wept for it, and now—"

"But you can buy it," Goodwin lied glibly. "I am moving out next week. The place doesn't exactly suit my needs." Never had he expected to see such glorious light in any woman's eyes. Never had he lied more gladly. On the morrow he would see the man from whom he had but yesterday bought Rosebank and have the transfer made without the girl knowing it.

Ninian had jumped up and without thinking slipped her fingers into Goodwin's.

"You have given me all the happiness in the world!" she cried, excitedly.

"Not quite," Goodwin said dryly, for in his mind he saw himself courting Ninian in the rose gardens and giving her a far greater happiness in love than she was getting in the lonesomeness of her cottage. "And I was quite right," he said to her some three weeks later, "wasn't I?"

"Yes," Ninian answered softly, "and I think I realized at the time that you were going to give me this happiness, too."

The roses in the garden nodded.

Inscriptions at the Fair.

Students of monumental inscriptions must often have observed, with the ordinary vice of inappropriateness, the want of variety of which Wordsworth spoke in his "Essay Upon Epitaphs." Ranging from Whitman to the Siamese Phra Ruang, there is no such deficiency in those at the Panama-Pacific exposition. But in seeking variety does not the far West stultify itself a bit. One series is harmlessly historical, commemorating the discovery of Panama in 1501 by Bastides, its crossing by Balboa, the discovery of California and the founding of Mission Dolores, and like events. The Court of Four Seasons quotes merely a Californian upon western nature, with Spencer's well known characterization of jolly summer and autumn all in yellow clad. But in paying tribute to great literary figures the exposition does equal honor to six occidental and six oriental nations. If visitors are moved by the beauty of the passages from Kalidasa, Hitomaro, Zuhayr and Firdausi to make some further acquaintance with these writers, San Francisco will have surpassed Chicago and St. Louis. To find a region so violently anti-Asiatic as the Pacific coast inscribing on its walls Japanese lays and Chinese philosophy is new evidence of the potency of cosmopolitanism.

"Movie" Now Accepted.

A moving picture magazine recently submitted to nearly 1,000 newspaper editors the question as to whether the word "movie" has obtained a sufficiently established place in our language to be used without quotation marks. More than 500 of them replied affirmatively, while only 220 expressed the opinion that the word was still on probation, a few declaring it ought to be abolished. The word has probably come to stay. It is indicative of a certain American simplicity and directness that "movie" should have found popularity in this country whereas in Europe the current word is "cinema." The old world stuck to the original Greek derivative name of cinematograph, and the public shortened it. In America we preferred moving picture—a name requiring no translation of the multitude.

Blacksmiths or Gardeners First?

The other day a blacksmith was arguing with a gardener as to which was the first trade in the world.

The gardener said it was gardening, and quoted from Genesis: "Adam was put into the Garden of Eden to till it."

"Ah," said Pat, who had stuck up for his own trade. "Who made the spades?"

TO STEADY AIRSHIPS

New Balancing Device of Practical Value.

Ordinary Wheel Control Enables Pilot to Correct Any Unusual Tilting Caused by Sudden Gusts of Wind—How It Operates.

Walter H. Phipps, widely known as an aeronautic designer, has obtained a patent on a new balancing device, applicable to any biplane or aeroplane.

The device consists of an aileron, or hinged section of the main plane, at each wing tip. The hinge or joint is parallel with the line of flight. The aileron is set at a rising angle to the wing surface, and in that position, the inventor states, it will correct any ordinary departure from the normal horizontal position of the aeroplane caused by varying air pressure, thus giving inherent stability up to a certain point.

To correct any unusual tilting caused by strong gusts an ordinary wheel control with connecting wires enables the pilot to shift the ailerons. In this operation the aileron on the low side is thrown flat, extending the length and sustaining surface of the depressed wing. Simultaneously the aileron on the rising wing is thrown upward, shortening the wing, giving it less sustaining power and thus correcting its rising tendency. The aileron thus raised also acts as a nearly vertical stabilizing fin for the time being, preventing any tendency to a side slip.

It is admitted that an increase of resistance to flight amounting to about 5 per cent results from the use of the ailerons at ordinary speed. For fast machines this percentage would be reduced by reducing the angle at which they are set, less correction being necessary to balance the wings in such a craft. On the other hand, it is urged that the ailerons solve the problem of stability in ordinary conditions with much greater efficiency than is possible by means of such devices as breaking the main plane at the center so that the entire surfaces of the wings are set at a dihedral angle with tips rising.

Women's Common Heritage.

Out of the many stories of the war comes one that, in its simplicity, is as eloquent as any could be of what this struggle means to those who stay at home. A correspondent who added to his keen quest for news an avoid eagerness for souvenirs approached a woman who was standing forlornly by the roadside, an evident refugee. "Have you any souvenirs of the war?" he asked, his curio-gathering instinct overcoming his human sympathy. Dry-eyed, the woman looked at him and in a voice betraying no emotion but the utter weariness of transcending grief she answered: "I have the grave of my son." There are thousands of such souvenirs scattered over France and Belgium, throughout Poland and Galicia. The hearts of the women of Britain, of France, of Belgium, of Germany, of Austria, of Russia and of Serbia have this common heritage.

Dog Watch Movies Latest.

There's a large and steadily growing number of people in New York who are afflicted with insomnia only at night. And in order to keep them up until the milkman comes around we are going to have a moving picture house where the performance begins at midnight and lasts until it is time to go home for the milk and rolls. It will be a regular dog watch movie or 10-cent Pullman, as they are called. There will be nothing to prevent tired tangoists who are afraid to go home in the dark from stealing a few minutes sleep between reels, but special policemen will be on the job to prevent anything else from being stolen. With nearly one-third of New York up after midnight the management believes it will fill a long-felt want.—New York Times.

Congestion in New York.

Persons who object seriously to the transportation services of Chicago, to the congestion at rush hours, the crowding, pushing, and similar inconveniences, might regard the problem in New York and then call themselves blessed.

The New York subway was built for 400,000 people a day. It really handles under popular protest as high as 1,200,000. The tenants of the Woolworth building alone would fill every train moving in one direction in the subway during a half hour. There are 300 passengers a year in the subway for every man, woman and child in New York city. The subway carries more passengers in a year than all the steam railroads in the United States.

BEST MEAL OF THE WEEK

On Sunday Evening Everybody Gets What He or She Wishes, and Enough to Satisfy.

Sunday evening supper is the best meal of the whole week, if it is just the ordinary kitchen Sunday evening supper and not the fancy sandwich chafing dish, hot chocolate, musical, literary, high-brow kind. There may have been chicken for dinner or a roast and gravy and mince pie, and nobody is very hungry. At least everybody thinks he is not hungry until he gets into the kitchen.

"Just put the things on the table and everybody help themselves," mother says. It is not grammatical, but it is the way she says it, and the best way to say it. And everybody does help "themselves," father and mother and the two or three or seven or eight children, all round the table and the sink and the ironing board, sitting on the radiator and the fireless cooker.

Maybe father decides that he will make pancakes, and nothing is more fun than watching father cook. Maybe mother consents to stir up some mush. Mush isn't so much to eat, but it is nice to watch her make it. Maybe you just pick the meat off the chicken bones, and everybody gets his fingers or his spoon in the pot of dumplings and gravy.

At any rate everybody gets exactly the thing that tastes best to him and Sunday evening supper in the kitchen is the only time and place where you can get that. If you like mustard, you have mustard; if you like chili sauce, you have chili sauce; if you like strawberry preserves, you have strawberry preserves. It has been years and years since there was ever more than one kind of "spread" or "relish" on the dinner table.

The only trouble is that the family eats much more than it ever eats in the dining room, and there is never anything left over for Monday. Some housekeepers would not permit a Sunday evening supper in the kitchen for anything. They put the chicken or roast away for Monday, and serve bread and milk or teakettle tea at the dining table. That kind of Sunday evening supper is no good at all, and must not be confused with the help-yourselves, everybody-in-the-pot sort. —Indianapolis News.

Odd Wedding Custom.

In northern Africa they have a way of providing for the wedding of their daughters that is interesting. When the guests arrive a man at the door receives the pence they give, and writes it down in a book. This means that when any of these guests have a wedding the host will give each of them just what they gave him. As it is, the guests pay for the wedding, and each one has either already received as much as he gives or will receive it later on.

Aiding the Memory.

Concentration and practice are the chief needs in memorizing poetry and dramatic lines. Competition seems to be the best way to stimulate concentration in children if they are not suffering from nervous troubles, and youngsters will find it most interesting to do these memory feats against time. A race to learn a poem may be as interesting as a hundred-yard dash. Adding columns of figures against time is not only interesting but exceedingly practical.

FACE COVERED WITH PIMPLES ALL HER LIFE

Nov. 23, 1914:—"All my life my face was covered completely with a mass of pimples, blackheads and blotches. I spent a lot of money on numerous remedies and treatments without success and no relief at all. I tried so many things that I was afraid my case could not be cured. Resinol ointment and resinol soap seemed to do me good right from the first. I used two jars of resinol ointment and some resinol soap, the total cost being only $2.00, and this completely cured my case. My skin is without a blemish, and I am the possessor of a beautiful complexion." (Signed) Mabell Ayres, Stone Mountain, Va. Every druggist sells resinol soap and resinol ointment.—Adv.

Steam-Dried Hay.

The up-to-date well-equipped farm seems now to have a method of protection during the hay season, against the losses which have been experienced in so many cases by the wetting of the rain and the preventing of proper drying. Experiments show that grass can be dried by steam within thirty minutes from the time it is cut, and then be ready to be stored away. The product thus obtained is superior to the ordinary sun-dried product, having a sweeter flavor and keeping fully as well. This can be applied, of course, only on a farm that has a steam plant, but it is fairly simple, and it certainly seems to promise to the farmer a protection against one of his inevitable trials in the past.

Gets Right Twist On Rheumatism

Makes Short Work of Cleaning Out Your Entire System—Aches and Pains Go Fast.

In S. S. S. You Get a Twist on Rheumatism that Settles It.

Many a rheumatic sufferer has been to the drug store for a bottle of S. S. S. and been handed something claimed to be "just as good." Truly, to ask for bread and be given a stone is still in practice. If you are troubled with rheumatism in any form be sure to use S. S. S. and note its wonderful influence.

S. S. S. has the peculiar action of soaking through the intestines directly into the blood. In five minutes its influence is at work in every artery, vein and tiny capillary. Every membrane, every organ of the body, every emunctory becomes in effect a filter to strain the blood of impurities. The stimulating properties of S. S. S. compel the skin, liver, bowels, kidneys, bladder to all work to the one end of casting out every irritating, every pain-inflicting atom of poison; it dislodges by irrigation all accumulations in the joints, causes acid accretions to disolve, renders them neutral and scatters those peculiar formations in the nerve centers that cause such mystifying and often baffling rheumatic pains.

And best of all this remarkable remedy is welcome to the weakest stomach. If you have drugged yourself until your stomach is nearly paralyzed, you will be astonished to find that S. S. S. gives no sensation but goes right to work. This is because it is a pure vegetable infusion, is taken naturally into your blood just as pure air is inhaled naturally into your lungs.

Get a bottle of S. S. S. today, and ask for S. S. S.

You may depend upon it that the store that sells you what you ask for is a good place to trade. Write to the Swift Specific Co., 204 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for their Book on Rheumatism.

WINTER WHEAT.

Since the introduction of hardy varieties of winter wheat from southeastern Europe the winter wheat area in this country has expanded steadily northward. It has been found by experience that winter wheat in general gives larger yields than spring wheat, because of its greater drought resistance and its earlier maturity, which enables it to escape hail, winds, disease, etc. In Iowa, for example, the average yields for five years show an advantage of 4.8 bushels in favor of winter wheat over spring wheat, and a four year test in Minnesota was even more favorable, showing an advantage of 8.5 bushels. A great number of varieties, however, of winter wheat make a careful selection on the part of the farmer advisable.

POTTING OF PLANTS.

It Is Absolutely Necessary to Have Good Soil.

"To have the best of success in the raising of plants it is absolutely necessary to have good soil," says M. F. Ahearn, associate professor of horticulture in the Kansas state agricultural college. "As a rule, there is only one way to get a good soil, and that is to mix it yourself."

A workable soil may be made from loam, sand and manure, but it will be greatly improved if leaf mold or peat is added.

Here are some directions given by Professor Ahearn for the preparation of loam used for the potting of plants: "The best loam for plants is made of well decayed sod taken from a pasture. After the grass has been killed by hard freezes in the fall the sod should be cut three or four inches deep and placed in a pile, the grass side down. For the sake of convenience make the pile three or four feet wide and as high and as long as necessary. Hollow out the top so as to catch the rains. If the year is a dry one a garden hose may be used to supply the moisture. In the construction of this pile alternate layers of sod and manure should be used. This compost should be allowed to weather for at least a year, preferably two years, before being used. When ready to be used it should be chopped and thoroughly mixed with well rotted manure."

The addition of leaf mold, peat or muck to this loam makes the potting soil more friable, increases its capacity of holding water, aids the circulation of air through the loam and induces a better growth of roots.

Mailing Bag For Parcel Post.

A mailing bag that can be used to inclose a great variety of goods is made as illustrated. An ordinary sack is procured, such as a salt sack, and a strip of cardboard about an inch wide and equal in length to the width of the bag is placed in the bottom. The bag is then stitched on a machine just above the strip of cardboard. This keeps a space of one inch at the bottom stiff enough to write upon where it is easily seen. The remaining space of the bag is used for the goods.—Popular Mechanics.

Danger of Dingy Stables.

There are thousands of dingy stables that might be sweetened and brightened immensely by sweeping and cleaning out the dust and cobwebs of years, giving the place a treatment with sulphur or other disinfectant and applying a coat of good whitewash to the walls and partitions and seeing that it reaches every crack and crevice.

"Sonnie" Six

Sonnie Robson celebrated the attainment of his sixth birthday with a party Wednesday afternoon. A number of his young friends were present, and their mothers and a few other ladies "chaperoned" them. Games and stories which Miss Beattie of San Jose told, furnished amusement for the children, while Mrs. James Moyle and Mrs. Warren Shelly sang and Miss Beattie played for the entertainment of the elders. Refreshments were in pink and white.

Mrs. H. A. Leigh is enjoying an outing in the Big Basin this week.

Miss Lyle Foster of Leigh avenue left last week for the San Diego fair.

Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Keith were among the Campbell sight-seers at the Jewel City this week.

Mrs. E. C. Merrill and children went to Santa Cruz Monday to spend two weeks at the beach.

Messrs. Hugo Ehret and Fred Ulm of Belleville, Ill., are here this week the guests of Mrs. Maria Poor.

Messrs. J. C. Ainsley, J. F. Duncan, S. G. Rodeck and R. K. Thomas motored to Sacramento on business yesterday.

Mesdames E. Davidson and D. H. Cramer entertained a small company of friends Thursday last at an informal afternoon.

Misses Ethel and Madge Clendenning came from San Francisco, Monday, for a visit with Mesdames Claud Gard and W. C. Bohnett.

The Country Woman's Club picnic which was to have been held at Congress Springs today, June 18, has been indelinitely postponed on account of so many members being away.

The "Boss and Devil" of this printery are enjoying a bunch of real fine Royal Ann cherries brought in from the E. N. Sharp ranch on Quito road. Bu-lieve ma, they were not pied nor thrown into the hell-box, but used to sweeten the crew on press-day.

Mr. and Mrs. Merle Lloyd came from San Francisco Tuesday to attend the Class night performance. Mr. Lloyd returned home the next day but Mrs. Lloyd remained for the commencement exercises. Miss Bernice Lloyd, one of the graduating class, will accompany Mrs. Lloyd to the city for a visit.

The cement and gravel for the new sidewalk from Alice Way in Hyde Park to Sunnyside avenue have been purchased and are on the ground ready for laying. Owing to the lack of help which was to be furnished, the work is not progressing very rapidly. As this will be a great benefit to the Sunnyside residents, a number of them heartily volunteered their services but they probably were not awafe of the arrival of the material before this time. About 250 feet are yet to be laid and it ought to be done before everybody is busy with the fruit.

J. M. Butts and cousin, Miss Wood, motored over the new highway to the Big Basin last week. The road is good for a new one but in places it is rather narrow. Mr. Butts advises visitors to the park to do their motoring there in the morning and return during the afternoon thereby avoiding other machines. From the park to Santa Cruz the road is very good and machines can pass almost anywhere. Coming from Soquel to the summit the road is very rough and from the summit this way the road is almost impassable on account of the state crews working on the new highway.

Methodist Church Notes

For the first time in several years every officer and teacher of the Sunday-school was present last Sunday, some twenty of them.

At the meeting of the Sunday-school board Wednesday evening, Mrs. Baldwin was elected superintendent of the primary department, a position that has long been vacant, the duties of the office having been performed by the assistant superintendent, Miss Bernice Lloyd. Mrs. Baldwin has the promise of the assistance for a considerable time of Mrs. Carruthers, a lady with large experience in primary work in the east.

Rev. J. J. Pardee, formerly our pastor at Carmel, arrived with his family this week to take up his residence on the Nelson place on Sunnyoaks avenue, which he has purchased. Mr Pardee's health has proven unequal to the nervous strain of the ministry, so he will take to ranching for a time. We will be glad to have him and his family associated with us in our church life.

The ladies of the Guild were very pleasantly entertained by the Aid in the church parlors Thursday afternoon. It it be a good and pleasant thing for "brethren to dwell together in unity," it is equally delightful to see the sisters get together occasionally.

A social and entertainment will be given in the lecture room this (Friday) evening by the Do-It-Now class, the Brotherhood class, and the Epworth League. Bring a little money with you as these young people want to raise enough to pay their subscriptions as organizations to the benevolences of the church for this year. Let us help them meet their pledges, and have a good time as well.

The Santa Clara Valley Preachers' Meeting convenes at Saratoga Monday afternoon and evening. The evening session will be of especial interest to the laity. Why not pay the Saratoga church a fraternal visit at this time?

Class Night

The class of 1915 of C. U. H. S. was greeted with a packed hall Tuesday evening when the Class Night "doings" were presented.

The program, which follows, was one of interest and merit, and all the numbers were thoroly enjoyed by the audience.

Piano Solo	Fay Billings
President's Address	Russell Metzler
Vocal Duet	Florence Mann and Gordon Mapes
Class Will	Marjorie Duncan
Recitation	Violet Saunders
Class Poem	Gordon Mapes
Class History and Prophecy

Some of the bequests made in the class will were particularly "pat" and created much amusement, and the class poem was above the average of high school poetic flights.

The combination of class history and prophecy was very clever, being given in the form of a three act play. The first act portrayed the members of the class in their early grammar school years on their way home at night, with the usual childish interests and difficulties under discussion.

Act two was the present, with the class on the way to a basket ball game, introducing the high school yell to good advantage as a close.

The third act was staged as the home of Evelyn Spillman, with all the class present, each having a few words to say in reference to his or her occupation or condition at that time, and then all joined in singing the class song. They were:

Fay Billings	Chorus Girl
Charles Brandenburg	Clown
Eleanor Carter	Chorus Girl
Catherine Cooper	Moving Picture Star
Ivan Cox	Clown
Leslie Cox	Delicatessen Storekeeper
Marjorie Duncan	Policewoman
Myrtle Dunham	Society Belle
Nanette Ellison	Portrait Painter
James Fablinger	English Professor
Cecil Kennedy	Stage Manager
Leland Lancaster	Minister
Bernice Lloyd	Quaker Girl
Florence Mann	Prima Donna
Gordon Mapes	Lawyer
Herman Metzler	Prize-fighter
Russell Metzler	Count
Erwin Righter	Socialist Judge
Sara Robinson	Hair Dresser
Violet Saunders	Settlement Worker
Evelyn Spellman	Returned African Missionary
Grace Talbott	Lion Tamer
Luella Thompson	Reporter

Mrs. Dwight Ross played a delightful piano selection between acts I and II. and as always in her home town was enthusiastically encored.

During the second intermission Prof. Snow showed the pictures of the class in three stages as infants, graduates, and in their future careers.

There remains now but one more event in the class history which is also, "the" event. Commencement, this (Friday) evening.

Some Fast Riding

Nic. Eisentraut, one of our Campbell boys, has made quite a record for himself and the Garden City Wheelmen of which he is a member. In the state cyclist meet last week he got first time in the 10 mile race doing the distance in 25 minutes 15 seconds. He also took first place in the 1 and 3 mile sprints making the fast time of 2:14 in the one mile and winning 30 points for his team in the 3 mile.

G. Semondi of San Jose won the first five mile race in the relay with a 25 yard lead over his nearest opponent. Both these boys deserve much credit for their glorious work at the meet.

Entertained Informally

The Misses Farley and Hayes delightfully entertained a bevy of young ladies at the S. L. Hayes home Saturday afternoon. Fancy work and conversation were the main diversions of the afternoon interspersed with games. The flower puzzle was much enjoyed, Miss Marguerite Bohrman being the lucky one. Miss Beth Kennedy captured the consolation prize.

The young ladies also tried their talents as artists in drawing Mother Goose pictures and some of them proved their ability.

Refreshments of pineapple ice, wafers and bonbons were served under the pergola.

Farm School Examinations

County Superintendent of Schools D. T. Bateman announces that entrance-examinations to the University Farm School at Davis will be held under his supervision at the office of the County Superintendent of Schools, June 24th, at 9 a. m.

These examinations are open to any young man 18 years of age or older who desires to enter the University Farm School next September 17th. If he is a graduate from a high school accredited to the University, it will not be necessary for him to take any examinations.

The entrance-examinations will cover English and Arithmetic. The examination in English will consist of the writing of a paper of about 500 words on one of several subjects; that in arithmetic will be the working of problems, including the application of percentage to farm problems; the finding of averages, and the application of these principles to ordinary business and farm problems.

The opportunities for the young man who combines practical ranch experience with technical training in agriculture are increasing faster than the supply of well equipped men, and this County should have a number of young men taking advantage of the education the State is offering at the University Farm School at Davis.

Of the 289 students enrolled this past year at Davis 19 are from this County.

Through the co-operation of our County School Superintendent, candidates taking this examination will know before they leave home whether or not they have passed, thus saving unnecessary expenses in going to Davis, unless they prefer to wait until the opening of school on September 17th before taking the examination.

W. B. Evans

The community was shocked Wednesday to hear of the sudden death of Mr. W. B. Evans early that morning caused by acute dilation of the heart following lagrippe.

The body was found in the yard at the C. L. Parker ranch on Union avenue where Mr. Evans had been living since disposing of his ranch south of town. Dr. Merrill was summoned at once and the coroner thought it unnecessary to hold an inquest. An autopsy was later held in Los Gatos.

Mr. Evans a native of Wisconsin was 62 years and 18 days old at the time of his death. He is survived by three sons, Robert T., of Los Gatos, Harry Fred, and Ralph H., of Campbell.

The funeral services, conducted by the Rev. W. H. Lloyd, were held at the Place parlors in Los Gatos. Interment at Los Gatos cemetery.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. Protecting the Newspaper

None of the vicious bills introduced in the last legislature against newspapers was passed, thanks to the efficient work of Friend W. Richardson and the California Press Association. A bill repealing the statute requiring a bond of $500 in libel suits was defeated. The passage of this measure would have invited a multitude of suits against publishers. The legislature took the sane position that the man who has been libeled need have no fear of furnishing a bond, while the man who merely seeks to annoy newspapers with fictitious allegations should be required to pay for the amusement. The cartoon law, prohibiting the printing of cartoons and pictures, was wisely repealed. This statute had been a dead letter for so many years that few people knew of is existence.—Stockton Mail
